★ OUR NATION'S HISTORY ★

The Declaration of Independence was written in 1776 by a committee of the Continental Congress that had three members: Ben Franklin, John Adams, and Thomas Jefferson. Franklin was already 70 at the time and would live another 14 years. Adams and Jefferson were younger men, and each would go on to become President of the United States – and they also became bitter political rivals in the young republic. In later life, they would become friends again and correspond for many years. Amazingly, Adams and Jefferson died on the same day, and, even more amazingly, that day was July 4, 1826 – exactly 50 years to the day from the signing of their Declaration.
